

Incentives

Professional development is only effective if your practitioners actually take advantage of it. How do you encourage and support participation in professional development? Obviously, the quality and relevancy of your professional development offerings will help, but you may find that it takes more. Incentives such as paid release time, training stipends for part-time teachers, paid substitutes, adequate travel budgets to support participation, or college tuition credits can increase the participation rate.